Beagley to Open New Show Room At Orland Park

Clarence E. Beagley the well known electrical contractor and radio dealer of Orland Park, has had a rapid growth in his business and has been obliged to expand his room in the James E. Creer building. Last winter Mr. Beagley took over the entire room of a new basement under the Creer store. This fall Mr. Creer had an upstairs added to his store and Mr. Beagley has taken over the new addition to meet his ever increasing need for more floor space. Mr. Beagley is putting on a grand opening celebration of the opening of his new second floor show room, Saturday afternoon and evening. He has secured radio stars of the RKO group to furnish the best of entertainment for the occasion. There is to be a continuous performance from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m. In addition to the entertainment refreshments will be served free to all. Every one from near and far is invited to come and bring their friends.

Mr. Beagley will have on display the new RCA radiolas, frigidaires, Fairbanks-Morse water systems, electric washers, electric mangles and other appliances.

Good work and good products are big factors contributing to Mr. Beagley's success.

Orland P. T. A. to Hold Minstrel

The "Dixie Dandy" Minstrel Show, which is being sponsored by the Orland Park P. T. A., will be given on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week, December 4 and 5, at the Orland Park School auditorium.

The show is under the direction of Mr. George Kohl, formerly with T. S. Denison & Company, Dramatic Publishers of Chicago. The chorus has been trained by Prudence Neff Thom as, well-known musician, now living in Orland Park, and they will sing old-time songs as well as popular hits of the day.

The show contains much lively singing by the endmen and the fine chorus of 35. There will be four vocal soloists presenting ballads and plenty of snappy jokes and cross-fire dialogue between the endmen and interlocutor. Specialties will consist of instrumental solos, a dancing act, male quartette, and a comic black face talking act.

Mr. Kohl and Mr. Ray Parker, also from Chicago, will act as endmen along with Messrs. John A. Klein, Harold Kinney, Earl Reish, and Orville Schmadeke, of Orland Park. Mr. Leonard Kay has been chosen as interlocutor. The ballad singers are Miss Grace Tooley and Mrs. Bernice Rahn; Messrs. Arthur Wood and Wade Thomas.

The cast also includes Mesdames Harriett Gee and Florence Knox who will harmonize an old-time melody, and other members of the chorus are as follows: Mesdames Hilda Cox, Marie Heiting, Lillian Jennings, Nina Kay, Gladys Kesser, Esther Klein, Mollie Reish, Bessie Uthe, Clara Uthe; Misses Adella Schmadeke, Lucille Schmadeke, Esther Neff, Eleanor Waje, Agnes Weiler; Messrs. Elsworth Bechtloff, Ike Cleveland, George Cox, James Creer, Jimmy Davidson, Royal Glahn, Harry Heiting, Billy Newcomb, and Lawrence Uthe.

Admission to the show will be 50 cents for adults and 35 cents for children.

The Thursday evening performance will be for children but adults who are unable to attend on Friday will be admitted on Thursday.

There will be an electric clock given as a door prize.

Mokena P. T. A. Card Party Success

An enjoyable evening was reported by all who attended the P. T. A. and 500 and bunco party last Monday night. It was a cold, disagreeable evening, but a large crowd turned out. In 500, the ladies having the highest scores were Mrs. Julia Marti, Mrs. Elmer Sippel, and Mrs. Ralph Coer. The gentlemen prize winners were: Louis Lauffer, George Rinke, and Irwin Warning.

Mrs. Mae Kolber donated a baking dish. A neat sum was secured from the sale of this dish to be used as a nest egg for the playground equipment committee. The committee is planning a card party for the early part of December so watch for the announcement.

NOVEMBER

November is an autumn month when leaves are turning red. The thing that I don't like is that the flowers are going to bed.

But then there is the pleasant ride, Winter is drawing nigh, Why worry about the flowers? There'll be more by and by.

—Dorothy Meinke.

Mrs. Florence Anderson and Mrs. R. J. Hug attended the Junior Garden Club meeting held at the Palmer House, Nov. 21, 1930. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Frederick R. Fisher and a very fine program for the junior work was planned.

In the afternoon at 2 p. m. Mrs. Knudson of Springfield, Illinois was the first speaker. She told of a very wonderful program that took place last Arbor Day. An elm tree was planted and the Governor took part in the dedication ceremony. About 5,000 boys and girls were in the parade.

The High School Band lead the parade followed by the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts.

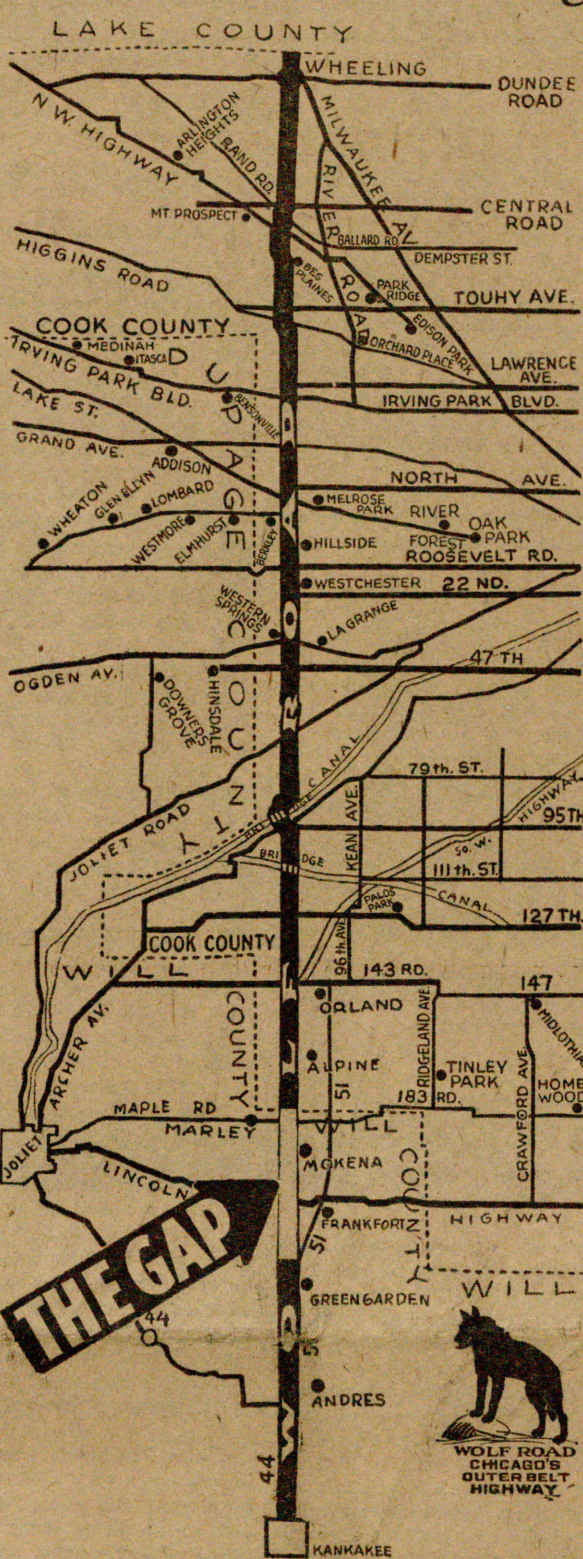

Each school had their own banner and the people of Springfield were thrilled by the wonderful demonstration.

A Glenn Ellyn Club member told of the work among their juniors. Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. R. J. Hug enjoyed this meeting very much indeed, and they have some very interesting plans for the Buds of the Junior Gardes Club of Tinley Park.

Auto Hits Truck

While Clarence Bettenhausen was driving along 183rd street near Keane avenue with a truck load of a stone, a car driven by a Chicago man attempted to cut around him, but in doing so he turned short and struck the rear end of the truck. The car, a Pontiac sedan, was quite badly damaged and was taken to the Steinhagen garage for repairs. Luckily no one was hurt.

Officials of Two Counties to Witness Formal Opening of Historic Wolf Rd. Paving Sun.

Sunday November 30th will stand out as a red letter day in the history of Mokena for on that day the first paved highway ever built through the village will be opened for traffic.

The grand opening of the historic Wolf road will be marked by a special dedicatory program given under the auspices of the News-Bulletin to be held at the St. Mary hall on Wolf road in Mokena Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Everyone is invited to attend. Everything is free and a very interesting program is assured.

The Orland Park band will furnish the musical part of the program.

Senator R. J. Barr of Joliet will be present as also will be members of the Will County Bond Issue committee and the county right of way committee.

Invitations have also been issued to Senator Arthur A. Huebsch of Cook County as well as other prominent Cook County officials. Edward Cowan, President of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce and a hard road booster has also been invited.

All of the county officials of Will County, including Probate Judge Fred Adams, County Judge Ralph Austin have also been asked to attend.

The editor of the News-Bulletin has prepared a historical sketch of Wolf Road which he will read at this celebration. Village and town officials of Frankfort and adjoining townships have been asked to attend.

Mayor Harry Mall, of Mokena, Mayor George Letts of Frankfort, Mayor Wm. Funk of Tinley Park and Mayor R. Jennings of Orland Park have been asked to cut the ribbons formally opening Wolf Road to traffic at the close of the program in the hall.

Although Wolf road has not been paved to the Lincoln highway as originally planned, efforts are being made to have this work finished in 1931. It is also planned to push Wolf road paving to the south to connect route 51 which is Wolf road from the Green Garden line to Kankakee and is paved that far.

Efforts are being made to induce Cook county to carry on the paving of Wolf road in that county to the Wheeling line. When all the pavement gaps on Wolf road are connected this will be the greatest trunk line highway in Illinois. It will connect with every east and west highway entering the city of Chicago as shown by the accompanying map. It will be of more than local importance—for it will benefit not only Will, Cook and Kankakee counties, but a vast region beyond the borders of these counties and will be the means of great development of the territory it serves.

Be sure to attend this celebration. The hall will be well heated if the weather should happen to be cold.

Wolf road is going to be the making of a great future for Mokena.

Orland Farm House Destroyed by Fire

The large farm residence of Christoph Keuch located four and a half miles southeast of Orland Park was destroyed by fire shortly after noon Saturday. Cause of the fire is unknown. Mr. Keuch was home alone at the time, asleep. Philip Bormet saw the fire and gave the alarm. The neighbors quickly responded and Mr. Keuch was aroused in time to flee the burning house. Very little of the household goods was saved.

The Orland Fire Department was called but the flames had made such rapid headway that the building was doomed. The loss is said to be partly covered by insurance in the Coopers Grove Fire Insurance Co.

The wind being in a favorable direction the adjoining farm buildings were saved.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing her father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. They make a runaway marriage. Briceland is furious, but helpless, as Ernestine is of age. Loring Hamilton, lawyer, wins Lillian's consent to be his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Pastano irritates Ernestine by criticizing Will for bringing her to such a place. Conscious of approaching motherhood, Ernestine opens a savings account. Will's father dies suddenly. Lillian and Loring are married. Will's mother dies immediately after the birth of Ernestine's baby. Changes in Will's office fail to bring advancement and Ernestine again is looking forward to motherhood. Pastano acquires a summer home near that of the Bricelands.

"It would be nice," said Ernestine vaguely, feeling hurt because she had not known about papa, or the stone merger—feeling out of things, "but I want to be with Will."

In July they went to Langley lake, where Lillian was established and where somehow she appropriated the role of hostess, although it was not her house any more than it was Ernestine's. Will refused to worry about the Pastanos living on the point, and Ernestine saw that he lacked her own snobbish prejudices about the lake colony. He took Peter and went to visit the Greeks the first morning he was there, and stayed all day, romping with the young Pastanos, teasing Alexandria, who adored him, and eating Madame Pastano's pickled fish.

Ernestine had asked John Poole to come down for the two Sundays they were at the lake. She had come to love the man as much as Will did, and had grown into the way of ignoring his bad habits. He was admirably sober the first Sunday he came down to them, and Will and Poole spent the day in the wood path and on the water, making ridiculous sketches in the sand, carrying Peter about with them.

But the second Sunday was a day of misfortunes. Ernestine was ill and could scarcely rise that morning, and it seemed to her that Will was impatient and unsympathetic.

Loring telephoned that he had stripped his gears and put the car in the garage. He would have to come on the train, and Ernestine realized with dismay that John Poole would be with him. Lillian brought the two from the station in her car. John Poole was already fuddled with drink and elaborately polite, and it was easily seen that Loring was in a state of nervous exasperation. His face was flushed, his brow furrowed.

"I've got to go right over to Pastano's to see a man that's coming out there today," he said to Lillian as soon as they had had Sunday dinner.

"If you are going to see Ruby, I'll go with you," said Mr. Poole. "I have a most important matter to discuss with Mr. Pastano. Mos' important. He has a nephew—yes, I know—as Will laughed—"he has forty-seven nephews—but this is a most particular one. This boy is to study modeling. He is to be the exception—an artist in a family of clever criminals. I'm to see Mrs. Pastano about him. I'll go with you."

He rose and took a familiar hold on Loring's arm.

"Will can take you over in the boat, after while," Loring said, "I must hurry, and Pastano can't talk to both of us at once."

"No, I want to go with you," insisted Mr. Poole.

Loring no longer made the faintest effort to conceal his disgust.

"Your desire is unrequited," he said, and Will laughed and came around the table to his friend and boss and took hold of him.

"You're coming with me, you old war-horse," he said. "You're drunk. I'll wager you haven't done a lick of work all week. We'll go over to see Ruby after while. Loring doesn't want you, John, so come along with me."

John Poole turned and detained Loring who was trying to escape.

"You don't want me?"

"No," said Loring nervously. "I've had enough of you—too much. I don't ever want to see you again as long as I live."

"Come outside and fight with me, and I will beat you, and then we'll go to Pastano's—together."

Loring was furious. "I won't fight with you—you old fool!—Will, for G—d's sake, take him off me. Why did you bring him down here, anyhow?"

"Don't be so hard with him," said Will, smiling wanly. "He's got a little money—he might come in handy some day. You've changed your mind about friends of mine before—Pastano and Wiston, for instance."

Loring turned to Lillian who stood, silent and grave, by her table. "If this is what I am to expect here it's the last Sunday I come down."

Will flushed. "So Ernestine is intruding now?" he said slowly. "Perhaps you have already consummated your intention of cheating her out of her privileges in this house as elsewhere—"

"Anybody could cheat Ernestine," exclaimed Loring. "She was cheated once and for good when she married you. She ruined her life then, and now she must endure anything because she lacks protection and is handicapped to boot."

Will took a step forward, his big hand raised, and though he still smiled his face was evil. He spoke low and rapidly, and with an indescribable effect of vituperation:

"You great big stuffed shirt—you imitation—you safe-player and bribe-taker, you! You coveter! Do you think I don't know what's the matter with you?"

There was a pause which lasted indefinitely. Loring had swollen to rage, and then he had collapsed, until he stood looking at Will with a dreadful, haunted face.

It was strange, Ernestine thought afterward, that none of them felt, even then, that Loring was afraid of Will. There was some other element which gave Will tremendous advantage. Before the blaze in Will's eyes, before his cursing breathless phrases, Loring fell into a strange dejection. The two men looked at each other in the stillness that swirled around them all. Will turned at last to Ernestine.

"Go get your things, kitten, and get the baby ready," he said in a gentle voice. "We'll all go back together. I'll go to the hotel and get a taxi to take us to the depot. We can get the afternoon train. Gather your things up again, John."

With tears running down her face, Ernestine obeyed him. Loring went off, cursing under his breath, and Mr. Poole followed him to shout unheeded threats and maledictions. Lillian helped Ernestine to get ready, both of them crying.

"It's the end," said Ernestine. "We can never see each other again now. Our lives are separated indefinitely," and Lillian was thinking, "What will mamma say?"

"I'll call you up, when I get in town. Write to me, Ernestine. Don't let them tear us apart."

"My life is with Will—yours with Loring," said Ernestine, and wept afresh, trying to stem the tears, trying not to care, but feeling the nervous, uncontrollable necessity for weeping.

In the train, going back to Chicago, she still cried now and then. "Why does Loring hate us so?" she asked at last in a low tone. "Especially me? Why does he hate me? He seems to want to wound me, to strike at me. He's done it before. But I've never harmed him. Why does he hate me, Will?"

"Hate you?" exclaimed Will, and looked at her strangely, his dark bright eyes searching her pale face for guile. "He doesn't hate you, Ernestine. But forget him—I'm glad something has happened. They've only made us unhappy, anyhow."

It was nice to be home again. Ernestine went about her little house with a feeling of comfort and joy.

Will was not due at the office until the end of the week, but on Monday, as Ernestine was finishing up a washing for the baby, he got dressed to go downtown. As she kissed him goodbye and watched him go, then turned back to the routine of home, Ernestine felt a sense of well-being blot out yesterday's turmoil. She resolved not to think about it, nor to worry.

It seemed to her that Will had barely had time to go to town and come back again before he stood in the kitchen doorway, his eyes upon her with such a look in them that she gave a little cry and her hand flew to her throat.

"Will—what's happened?"

He put his hat down slowly. He hung his head, unable to speak to her, but at last he got it out.

"I've lost my job."

"Will—"

He said no more.

"Tell me—what happened?"

"Craps."

Ernestine sat down weakly in a chair by the kitchen table and gave a foolish-sounding laugh.

"Unarm, Eros—" she exclaimed and grinned at him. "I'm glad. You would never have quit, and now you'll get a job where they'll appreciate you."

"Ernestine!" he said, and choked.

"I'll make good for you—I will! You'll see—some day."

Mr. Poole had not been at the office when Will was dismissed by Mr. Wiston. It was some days before he learned the details and gave them to Ernestine. The fellows had all surrounded Will with affectionate greeting on his arrival in the office unexpectedly. They had at once planned to eat supper in a crowd. Somebody produced dice to determine immediately who would have to pay. They squatted on their heels in a close ring between the sloping desks, and Tommy Tucker cried a fierce schoolboy "jiggers" at them. Will held the dice, and he straightened up and turned about boldly rattling the cubes in his big hand, and faced Mr. Wiston.

Mr. Wiston made quick work of him, almost, it seemed to Will, or so he said, as though he were glad of the chance. Within ten minutes after his arrival, Will walked out of the Sun offices, his possessions, done up in a paper package, under his arm, while half a dozen indignant but futile youngsters mourned after him.

But John Poole would not have it. "You fire my help and you fire me," he told Wiston, and he left bag and baggage.

Nobody had thought of this. Mr. Wiston remonstrated with him, but nothing would satisfy John Poole except Will's reinstatement, and that Wiston would not concede.

So Will had added to his own anxieties a sense of responsibility about John Poole, of concern over Ernestine's break with that part of her family which was in or near Chicago.

Mr. Poole let it be known in newspaper circles that he and his assistant were available, but to his astonishment he had no offers. He was old, he had been identified with the Sun for many years. The Sun's rivals were busy developing their own artists and establishing them. It was only a year or two longer, it was said, for John Poole, and anyhow he would probably be back at the Sun within a month.

Patti Only Member of Fair Sex at Banquet

In 1859 Adelina Patti made her debut at the Academy of Music in New York in "Lucia," says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle Magazine. Not since Jenny Lind had a singer so captivated her audience. To the end of their lives many of her admirers insisted that she was the last one entitled to be called "la diva."

Twenty-five years later, in 1884, Patti again sang at the academy. To her honor a banquet was planned by a number of prominent New York men, including Judge Daly, William Steinway and Nathan Stetson. Naturally the wives of these men were expected to be present, but they virtuously refused to sit at the table with Patti, who had been divorced from her first husband, the Marquis De Caux, and married to Nicolini, the Italian tenor.

Extremely embarrassed, the gentlemen sent a committee to put the case to Mme. Patti as delicately as possible, and ask her if she would consent to be the guest of themselves only. Patti consented unhesitatingly, and she was the only woman present at a party of some seventy masculine admirers, in the ballroom of the Hotel Brunswick.

Date From Colonial Times

The Pennsylvania Dutch are descended from Germans who settled in Pennsylvania during the Colonial period. They began to migrate to Pennsylvania about the time the Quakers did. Many of them were from the Rhenish Palatinate. It has been estimated that in the years 1708 and 1709, more than 30,000 Germans went to England, and were transported to America in English ships.

ZACCHAEUS THE PUBLICAN, A BUSINESS MAN CONVERTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 19:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Thought Jesus Would Not Care.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Righted His Wrongs.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Religion Changes One's Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Business Christian.

I. Jesus Passing Through Jericho (v. 1).

Jericho is noted as the stronghold of the Canaanites, which was miraculously delivered into the hands of Israel in response to their faith (Josh. 6), and also for the faith of Rahab which saved her from destruction with the city (Heb. 11:30, 31). It was thus noted as a city where faith and unbelief played against each other. It was fitting that Jesus should pass through Jericho. Faith and unbelief again were manifested. Two notorious sinners, Rahab and Zacchaeus, were saved at Jericho.

II. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus (vv. 2-4).

1. His object (v. 3).

He sought to see who Jesus was. Though perhaps prompted by curiosity, he eagerly sought Jesus.

2. His difficulties (vv. 2, 3).

(1) His infamous business (v. 2). He was a tax collector for the Roman government. The very fact that a Jew held such an office under the hated Romans would make him extremely unpopular. Then, since he was rich, it was evident that he had practiced extortion in collecting the taxes. Many men and women have a hard time in coming to Christ because of their questionable business relations.

(2) His shortness of stature (v. 3).

He was too small to crowd his way through to Jesus, and being hated by the people they had thrust him aside.

3. His persistence (v. 4).

He ran before the multitude and climbed up into a tree. What he lacked in stature he was determined should be made up by the height of the tree. Though Zacchaeus' legs were too short to enable him to see Jesus they were long enough to run past the crowd and enable him to climb the tree.

III. Jesus Finding Zacchaeus (vv. 5, 6).

While Zacchaeus was trying to see Jesus, Jesus was looking for him. This is always the case. When desire is stirred up in a heart to see Jesus, Jesus is seeking that one. When Jesus saw him he commanded him to come down from the tree and declared his intention to go home with him. Zacchaeus got more than he expected. Jesus called him by name. He did not utter a word which would humiliate Zacchaeus. Jesus knew his heart's desire and dealt accordingly with him. All souls who earnestly seek Jesus shall be found of him. How wonderful his grace, that regardless of one's past life, Jesus will receive him as a friend and enter into fellowship with him! Zacchaeus quickly responded. He came down and with joy received Jesus.

IV. Zacchaeus' Conversion (vv. 7-10).

His conversion was sudden and thorough. He was converted before he had reached the ground.

1. What the crowd said (v. 7).

They said just what they say today when sinners come to Christ. They call to mind the man's former sins. They also reproached Christ, saying that he had gone to be a guest of this notorious extortioner, the tax collector. That for which they reproached Jesus was his glory. His supreme mission was to save sinners (v. 10).

2. What Zacchaeus said (v. 8).

His conversion was thorough. It took hold upon his heart. His new life began with resolution and restitution. He dedicated half of his goods to the poor. The man who a little while ago was a grafter was now a generous giver. His conversion got hold of his pocketbook. His determination to make restitution wherein he had wrongly exacted taxes shows the genuineness of his conversion. While God forgets the past of a sinner when he comes to Christ, the sinner who is converted will seek to right all wrongs, he they unkind words or unrighteous deeds. Sorrow for sin is not enough when restitution is possible.

3. What Jesus said (vv. 9, 10).

"Today is salvation come to thy house." The publican was now a child of God, a son of Abraham. Salvation is a present reality when one receives Christ.

TEMPTING TAPIOCA DISHES

In many dishes where cornstarch is used for thickening, tapioca may be substituted. Many object to cornstarch largely because it is not well cooked. Any starchy substance needs cooking to burst the starch cells and make it digestible.

The following is something new and worth trying. Cook one-third of a cupful of quick cooking tapioca with one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and two cupfuls of scalded milk in a double boiler until the tapioca is clear. Pour into small deep pan and chill thoroughly. Unmold and cut into one-third inch slices. Fry thinly sliced bacon until crisp. Remove from the pan, dip the tapioca slices in flour and fry until a golden brown. This is served with the bacon.

Cranberry Relish.—Cook one-half cupful of tapioca with one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth cupful of raisins and one quart of cranberry juice and pulp strained and heated, for fifteen minutes in a double boiler or until the tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of walnut meats and four oranges peeled and quartered. Chill and serve as a sweet relish with fowl or meat.

Lemon Sauce.—Cook three table-spoonfuls of tapioca in two cupfuls of boiling water in a double boiler until clear, stirring frequently. Add two table-spoonfuls of butter, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, three table-spoonfuls of lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls of grated lemon rind and eight marshmallows cut into small pieces. Serve poured over cake for pudding.

Cheese Souffle.—Cook three table-spoonfuls of tapioca in one cupful of milk until the tapioca is clear, stirring often. Add one cupful of grated cheese, stir until melted. Cool, add three beaten egg yolks, one teaspoonful of salt and three well beaten egg whites folded in at the last. Bake in a well greased baking dish, set into a pan of water. Bake until the souffle is brown and shrinks a trifle. Serve hot.

"Shieling of My Sorrow"

Typical Highland Legend

The following legend is associated with Aneda No Dhubach, the sloping ground lying to the east of Loch Drom, on the way from Garve to Ullapool, in the highlands of Scotland. Three young men from Strathmore were returning home from the low country where they had been working all summer and autumn. They reached Loch Drom in the evening, and as the night was stormy, they decided to stay in a shieling that was near. One of the men was a piper, and had his pipes with him, and to pass the time away he struck up a tune on the pipes, while his two companions danced to the music. One of the lads said it would be fine if they had some lassies to dance with. He had hardly spoken when three women entered the shieling, and joined the dancing. The dancing and playing went on for a long time, and at last the two men sat down on the seat, and the women seated themselves beside them. The piper, feeling all was not right, looked at his two companions, and was horrified to see them dead. Slipping out, leaving his plaid with the women, he ran for his life as fast as he could. The women followed, and continued to pursue the poor, exhausted piper until dawn, when he came in sight of Fasgrianach, and escaped from his evil pursuers. When the mothers of the dead men arrived at the shieling the next day they bewailed their loss, repeating the words "Aneda No Dhubach"—"Shieling of my sorrow."—Montreal Family Herald.

Nothing New

The young son of an Indianapolis physician is intensely interested in moths. He reads everything that comes to hand concerning them. One day when his father saw him poring over a big volume in the library, he said:

"What are you reading, son?"

The son replied: "Oh, about moths, but they don't tell me anything I don't already know about them."

The interested parent asked: "Well, what is the name of your book," when son answered:

"What All Mothers Should Know."

Woman's Vanity

The late begum of Bhopal, India, was the only woman potentate in Asia. When her son was born, she said: "The greatest depth of mercy and benevolence lies in a woman's heart. It has been a singular blessing of Allah that for three generations no son was born to take the throne."—Woman's Home Companion.

WATERS

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT WAS just 40 years ago that Sitting Bull came to the end of his trail of implacable hostility to the white man and the fortieth anniversary of his death finds a white man engaged in writing the biography of this famous red man. From the Houghton Mifflin company comes the announcement that the recent award of one of the Guggenheim fellowships to Stanley Vestal, already well known as a biographer of Kit Carson, will enable him to devote himself exclusively to work on his forthcoming volume on the life of Tatanka Yotanka (Sitting Bull) of the Hunkpapa Teton Sioux.

Sitting Bull was killed near his home on the Grand river in North Dakota, December 15, 1890. By the same ironical fate which overtook two other outstanding irreconcilables—or "Indian patriots," as many people choose to regard them—King Philip of the Wampanoags and Pontiac of the Ottawas, Sitting Bull met his death at the hands of men of his own race.

Today out on the Standing Rock reservation lives an eighty-year-old Indian who was visited by Marshal Foch and Queen Marie of Rumania during their tours of this country in recent years and who, a few months back, was received at the White House by President Hoover. Red Tomahawk is his name and, although he is worthy enough of honor as a brave warrior in the old days of intertribal warfare and as an Indian policeman who was often called upon for duty filled with hardship and danger, he has been widely advertised and is best known to the white man of today for the doubtful distinction of being "the slayer of Sitting Bull."

When Sitting Bull died there were those who hailed the event as the end of an era. For popular imagination had fastened upon this tribal leader of the Sioux as a symbol of the threat which had hung over the American pioneer for generations and in a larger sense as the symbol of an ever-present danger to white supremacy on this continent. So his death was looked upon as removing the last obstacle to satisfying the land hunger which had driven the white man westward ever since the earliest days of settlement on the Atlantic seaboard. As a matter of fact it was nothing of the sort. The issue of white vs. red supremacy had been settled long before. In its larger implications, Sitting Bull's death was an echo of a fight that had already been won. Historically it was an anti-climactical ending to the career of an individualist fighting a lost cause. Ethically it was the murder of a caged eagle.

Estimates of Sitting Bull's character and importance vary. He has been called a physical coward and a brave warrior. He has been designated as a great leader and a far-seeing native statesman; and he has been denounced as an impractical schemer, a faker and a fraud. But there is one thing about him upon which both friend and enemy can agree—he never deviated from his distrust of and his dislike for the white man.

There was ample evidence of that hostility during the wars with the Sioux in the fifties and sixties, culminating in the defeat of Gen. George A. Custer and the annihilation of a part of his command, the Seventh cavalry, at the battle of the Little Big Horn in Montana on June 25, 1876. Sitting Bull's part in that tragic affair has been a subject for much dispute, but popular opinion made him the arch-enemy, even though the actual leaders of the Indian fighting men that day were Gall of the Hunkpapas, Crazy Horse of the Oglalas and Two Moons of the Cheyennes. According to the "popular idea" he ran away at the first attack, was "making medicine" in the hills during the battle and returned later to claim credit for it. But there is evidence from the Sioux that he helped repel the Reno attack, even though he was not present when Custer's immediate command was overwhelmed.

Whatever had been Sitting Bull's role at the Little Big Horn, his prestige among the Sioux seems to have been enhanced by the outcome of the Custer battle, but it was rapidly diminished by the vigorous campaigning of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who defeated various detachments of the hostiles and finally drove Sitting Bull and his followers across the border into Canada. There he remained until 1881 when he surrendered at Fort Buford under promise of amnesty, a promise which was immediately violated when he was confined as a prisoner of war at Fort Randall. Finally with his band of Hunkpapas he was settled near the Grand river on the Standing Rock reservation.

At this time there was great unrest and dissatisfaction among the Sioux. Penned up on small reservations these people who had once roamed over a veritable empire suffered from short rations, doled out to them by their conquerors, and a growing sense of the indignities to which they had been subjected. At this crisis there appeared a half-breed Indian in Nevada proclaiming a new order of things for the red man. A Messiah was coming to overthrow the white man and return to the red man all that had once been his. In preparation for this coming of his savior, the Indians were instructed to inaugurate certain ceremonials, chief among them the Ghost dance.

Whether Sitting Bull was a genuine believer in the Ghost Dance religion or saw in espousing it a chance to regain some of his lost prestige among his people and an opportunity for rallying the Sioux in another effort to resist the whites is difficult to say. But it was probably the latter. The result, so far as he was concerned, was to focus the growing suspicion and alarm of the government upon him, especially after Sitting Bull at a Ghost dance in his camp broke the peace pipe which he had kept sacredly since his surrender at Fort Buford, saying that he was ready to die for this new religion if need be.

Upon hearing of this Maj. James McLaughlin, agent on the Standing Rock reservation, recommended to the Indian department that Sitting Bull be arrested and removed from the reservation. He renewed the recommendation after a personal visit to Sitting Bull's camp convinced him that the latter was determined to stir up trouble and perhaps precipitate an outbreak. But the agent's recommendations were disregarded by the acting Indian commissioner and on December 12 the War department instructed Col. R. C. Drum, commanding officer at Fort Yates, to make the arrest, calling upon McLaughlin for such co-operation and assistance as would be needed.

McLaughlin conferred with Drum and found him fully in agreement as to the course of procedure. It was to make the arrest on the next ration day, December 20, and the Indian police were to do it with the soldiers from Fort Yates at a convenient distance to aid in case Sitting Bull's followers attempted a rescue. However, on December 14 it was discovered that Sitting Bull was preparing to leave the reservation and join a large group of Indians who had stampeded from the Pine Ridge reservation into the Bad Lands upon the approach of troops at Pine Ridge. So McLaughlin and Drum decided to act immediately.

Thirty-nine regular policemen and four specials, commanded by Lieutenant Bull Head and Sergeant Shave Head and Red Tomahawk were ordered to proceed to Sitting Bull's camp that night and make the arrest early the next morning.

Just after dawn the police reached Sitting Bull's camp and halted before the two houses in which lived the Hunkpapa leader, his two wives and his sons and daughters. Ten policemen headed by Bull Head and Shave Head entered one of the houses and found there Sitting Bull, his wives and his seventeen-year-old son, Crow Foot. Bull Head told Sitting Bull that he was under arrest and must go to the agency, to which the chief made no objection.

Stories of what happened next there do not agree in all respects. According to the account of Dr. Charles A. Eastman, an educated Sioux and an authoritative writer on the history of his people, Sitting Bull, finding himself "surrounded by armed men and himself led away to be taken to what fate, cried out loudly: 'They have taken me; what say you to it?' . . . The police harangued the crowd in vain; Sitting Bull's blood was up and he again appealed to his men. His adopted brother, the Assiniboine captive whose life he had saved so many years before, was the first to fire. His shot killed Lieutenant Bull Head, who held Sitting Bull by the arm. Then there was a short but sharp conflict, in which Sitting Bull and six of his defenders and six of the Indian police were slain, with many more wounded. The chief's young son, Crow Foot, and his devoted 'brother' died with him."

Major McLaughlin, in his book "My Friend, the Indian," published several years ago by the Houghton Mifflin company, tells the story thus: "As Sitting Bull stepped out with his captors he walked directly toward the horse, with the evident intention of mounting and accompanying the police. He was some distance from the door when his son, Crow Foot, seeing that the old man intended to make no resistance, began to revile him: 'You call yourself a brave man and you have declared that you would never surrender to a bluecoat, and now you give yourself up to Indians in blue uniforms.' . . . The taunt hit Sitting Bull hard. He looked into the mass of dark excited faces and commenced to talk volubly and shrilly, and there was a menacing movement in the crowd."

"He looked about him and saw his faithful adherents—about one hundred and sixty crazed Ghost Dancers—who would have gone through fire at his bidding. . . . He made up his mind to take his chance and screamed out an order to his people to attack the police. Instantly Catch-the-Bear and Strikes-the-Kettle, who were in the front rank of the crowd, fired at point-blank range. Catch-the-Bear mortally wounding First Lieutenant Bull Head, and Strikes-the-Kettle shooting First Sergeant Shave Head in the abdomen. Bull Head was a few yards to the left and front of Sitting Bull when hit, and immediately wheeling, he shot Sitting Bull through the body, and at the same instant Second Sergeant Red Tomahawk, who with revolver in hand was rear guard, shot him in the right cheek, killing him instantly; the lieutenant, the first sergeant and Sitting Bull falling together."

National Stock Show

Soon Opens Its Doors

America's huge congress of agriculture, the International Live Stock Exposition, will open its doors at the Chicago Stock Yards on Saturday after Thanksgiving.

In keeping with the Thanksgiving season, there will be multiple exhibits of rural wealth there. The best of the 1930 harvest, the choicest of the feed-lots of the land, the sprightliest of the stables of this country and Canada, the fleeciest of the flocks, the aristocracy of the pork families, the most select of the blue-blooded herds of the continent will vie for the attention and admiration of the thousands from town and farm that will crowd the exposition halls during the first week of December.

Attracts Only Best

County shows, State Fairs, and regional expositions held earlier in the season serve as weeding processes from which only the best will be sent to this great continental clearing house of agriculture where ribbons of national and international significance are tied.

All that is outstanding in the rural world—human, animal and vegetable, will be gathered here. Prize herds and flocks and the men who fashioned them, field crops of rare perfection and the men who grew them will come in this far-famed event. The partnership of man and nature and the close comradeship and affection between young boys and their prize charges are inspiring.

To the man, woman or child from the farm the International sets goals for greater attainments. To the man, woman or child from the city it is fascinating, informing, entertaining. The exposition has grown to be the contact point of the continent for those who breed and those who feed; for those who sell and those who buy and for all that great and varied number of stockmen, shippers, grain farmers, commission men, packers, breeders, journalists and city and town laymen who meet here each year. It is a melting pot brimming with everything rural.

Heide Voices Welcome

Secretary-manager B. H. Heide of the exposition issues a final welcome to the people of the country at large to attend the 31st anniversary celebration of America's premier live-stock show, November 29 to December 6. All railroads will offer special reduced fares to Chicago at this time he says.

Legion Is Organizing Welfare Ass'n

By Harvey Thormahlen

We hear and read much of funds being raised and aid being rendered in other communities, and it is thought all will agree that the same emergency exists in our community, possibly in a larger degree than we have realized. If all work together so as to alleviate any suffering in our community, Midlothian can be made a happy and contented community.

Every community should have a Welfare Association to render immediate aid to needy families within the community, says the Legion. Such a Welfare Association should be composed of all organizations within the Community, working together so as to avoid duplication of effort and thereby treat all cases alike, with the exception of course, of handling cases according to the size and need of each family.

It was suggested that the Legion take the initiative and organize a Community Welfare Association in Midlothian. This organization work is now well under way, and a joint meeting of all organizations responding will soon be held, after which the new Association will start functioning immediately, as the winter is setting in, people in our community will be suffering, and immediate aid can be rendered.

Referendum on Bonus

Members of thirty posts of the American Legion in the southern part of Chicago and Cook County, comprising the Fourth district of the organization, have voted to petition the national commander to urge the submitting of an immediate referendum on the question of paying a veterans bonus at once. This was announced following a meeting of the post's representatives Wednesday evening, Nov. 19 in the field house at Longwood drive and 96th street. The posts suggested that the members of the Legion as a whole seek favorable action from the President and congress.

Veteran's Bureau Information

At the above District Meeting, Mr. Schlupp gave an interesting and instructive talk on the provisions of the Bogardis Act as relating to ex-service men. This information is now available at Midlothian Post No. 691. Doctor Scott, the head of the hospital at Hines, Illinois, also spoke, imparting interesting and instructive information, as for instance he stated:

They now have 1600 beds in this hospital.

Up to October 1st, 15,689 claims filed; paid out $758,003.31 in claims; handled 44,585 insurance policies; 508 loans made on policies totaling $275,257.70; 3531 loans made on Adjusted Service Certificates, totaling $481,826.17; handled 15,932 applications for disability allowance and have paid out $32,303.97; disbursements now exceed more than $2,000,000 a month for the care of veterans; of this 1.7 goes for salaries—the rest to veterans. Information regarding all these claims now on hand at Midlothian Post No. 691. The Legion maintains a representative at Hines for the purpose of assisting ex-service men in filing their claims. Service Officer Henry Krone is at your service in Midlothian Post No. 691. We invite all ex-service men to join our Post. Dues only $3 per year. Headquarters 147th St. and 41st avenue.

Woman's Club Activities

The Woman's club is giving an old fashioned box supper on Monday evening, December 1st.

Each lady will bring a lunch for two in a fancy box. When sold the highest bidder gets the box and eats supper with the owner.

The last affair of this sort which was given two years ago was enjoyed so much that everyone stayed until 2 a. m.

There will be cards and bunco. Those not wishing to bring a box lunch may buy coffee and cake. Coffee will be served with the lunches. Mrs. Michael Hollearn is chairman with Mrs. Jess Horney, Mrs. Harry Clarke and Mrs. Roy Andrews assisting.

This afternoon the Woman's club is giving a pound party at their club house. Instead of a ticket each woman will present at the door a pound of anything that can be used to make up Christmas baskets. Mrs. Jess Horney is chairman.

Schools

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Where ever possible the staff of THE MIDLOTHIAN MESSENGER has extended personally their invitation to the schools of Bremen Township to make full use of this column. We believe that the pupils will be interested in seeing their school news in print. Starting in December we shall give some small prize to the best-written news item of the month. News must reach us not later than Tuesdays.

This week Francis Duly, secretary of the Bremen Achievement club, submits a news item from the Bremen school. It is well-written, but he made one slight mistake; he forgot the date of the program. Remember, kiddies, every news item must contain the following information: WHO, WHAT, WHEN, WHERE, WHY and HOW.

The Bremen School Gives Thanksgiving Party

The program opened with an achievement meeting given by the children of the upper grades. Miss McClaughry spoke and also brought with her Mr. Beatty, an entertainer. A recitation, "Signs of the Times", written by Paul Lawrence Dunbar, was given by George Atton in Negro costume. A Health Play was given by the children of the lower grades. Recitations were given by Irene Tucker, in farmer costume, Mae Cook and Frances Duey. There was a very big crowd. The program closed with "The First Thanksgiving Day", given by the children of the upper grades.

Thanksgiving Entertainment at St. Stanislaus

Their annual Thanksgiving day entertainment was presented by the St. Stanislaus school pupils in the school hall last night at 7:30. The auditorium was crowded with parents, relatives and friends of the children. There were 10 items on the program including songs, dances, recitations and two plays. Both English and Polish were used. The program follows:

1. Grumbling Tommy.
2. Ciozia Z Ameryki.
3. Sleep Darling Sleep.
4. Moja Trabka (Malce).
5. Snowflakes.
6. Jeatto Cuota Ned Catami.
7. Ghost at the Boarding School.
8. Castinets.
9. Tramwog.
10. Ciebie Boze.

Posen Children See Chicago Play

Forty of the St. Stanislaus school children accompanied the five nuns of the St. Stanislaus parish to a play "Power of Sacrifice" presented in Polish by the pupils of Mother of Good Counsel high school in Chicago. The play was written by Sister Cyrilla of the Felician order.

The party was driven to Chicago in the cars of Bruno Gordon, Edward Borys, Joseph Urbanavicz, George Sendren, Joe Mikrut and John Hawrycio.

NEW CHEVROLETS

Chevrolet's new car for 1931, priced substantially below current levels, went on display recently throughout the nation.

Dealers throughout the United States put the new models on exhibition nearly two months in advance of the customary date for the showing of the annual new car.

This move in advancing the announcement date, it was felt by Chevrolet officials, would render a distinct contribution to the cause of general business revival by insuring extraordinary activity during two normally dull business months for the 200,000 people throughout the United States who depend directly upon Chevrolet for their livelihood.

Among the improvements are a fully insulated front compartment, smoother and quieter transmission, and liberal use of rustless chromium plate or exposed bright parts. Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, and fully enclosed weatherproofed wheel brakes continue as standard equipment.

WHO'S WHO in MIDLOTHIAN

E. A. Burns

E. A. Burns, 4127 West 147th st., was born in Pomeroy, Iowa, on April 14, 1881, the son of A. S. and Mary Geddings Burns. He attended the grade school in Calhoun county, Iowa. While a youngster he lived on the farm, spending his leisure hours in the winter in hunting and trapping muskrats and other game. Iowa was so divided that there were country schools every two miles, and, as his father donated the school site, he did not have far to walk to school.

He attended high school at Warrenton, Missouri. In those days football had not become a school sport, although baseball was quite popular. Box suppers and church socials were the principal social activities.

At the age of 18 Mr. Burns left home and spent three winters in the backwoods of Minnesota. There he drove six horse sleighs through the snow—or when snow was scarce, over the ice skidways—some 20 miles to the mills.

Coming back to Missouri, he entered the Southwestern business college of St. Louis. After finishing his studies there, in 1905 he married Anna E. Rollson, of Denison, Texas. He entered the teaming business for himself with 10 teams and wagons, taking care of the Luyties Bros. Grocery Co. 26 stores. When this firm went out of business, he sold out.

At the age of 24 he joined the Metropolitan Police force in St. Louis. He was in uniform but a short while when he was given a plain clothes assignment and then placed on the motorcycle squad. These squads were then new in St. Louis, the handling of auto traffic a new science and the business of riding a very hazardous one.

The squads, then making a total of 14 men, were given a write-up in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of May 9 1915. Officers then drew $90.00 a month. Mr. Burns was Sergeant of one of the squads. The article mentions an accident in which a car struck Burns and Benderath, his partner, killing the latter and critically injuring Burns, who bears a scar over his left eye to this day. Most of the living members of the squad are crippled for life.

While Mr. Burns was on police duty there, the late Arthur A. B. Woerheide was president of the board of police commissioners, appointed by the governor of the state of Missouri to conduct the affairs of the department.

Like Chief Terry of Midlothian, Officer Burns made the front page of the Metropolitan press. Stopping a big red Packard one day, he was informed that he had stopped the first lady of the state, Mrs. D. B. Francis, wife of the governor. He was also informed that the first lady did not need a state license. Finding nothing in the statutes to that effect, Officer Burns proceeded to arrest the chauffeur—and got away with it. Again he stopped the daughter of the editor of the Post-Dispatch and the editor proved to be as irascible as all editors are said to be.

Resigning in 1916, he came to Chicago to work for the Pennsylvania railroad, until 1920. Then the family went to California for nine months. Returning to Chicago he worked at the Sherman house as detective. But after living in California, he could not be satisfied with Chicago. He moved to Midlothian nine years ago and entered the employ of the Rock Island railroad.

In April of last year he was elected trustee of the village and now serves as chairman of the committee on police and public safety.

A Message To The Parents Of Midlothian School Children

On November 19, 1930 at a Fire Drill in the various schools, the teachers have a great deal of credit coming to them, for the efficiency in which they conduct their rooms, but the children knowing that it was a drill and not a fire were inclined to play a little, which slowed things up a bit. I want to ask the parents to talk to the children, instructing them to co-operate with the teachers and not play at a fire drill, as we can never tell when it will be a fire, and not a drill. Please learn to save every second possible, as it may mean the life of a child in a fire.

Now try and beat your record at each drill and see what room can be the fastest in getting out.

Signed: J. Sagadin, Chief.

Bremen Township Health Topics

Eleanor Gallagher, R. N.
Rural Nursing Service of Cook Co.

There will be Child Welfare conference Tuesday Dec. 2nd at the McIntosh real estate office, 146 St. and Central Park, from 10 to 12 A. M. The Woman's club are going to see that the rooms are cleaned, and the Lions' club are going to have the place heated before the babies begin to arrive. We have finished the physical examinations in all the schools in the township, except the Midlothian public school and we are just waiting for them to move into their new building. Some of the health charts are already in the class rooms and the rest will be posted the first week in December. We are truly proud of the fact that the school inspection has been completed at such an early date, which leaves a great deal of time for social welfare and other constructive work.

At the Child welfare conference in Robins Thursday we had 35 children and 27 of this number were given the Toxine Anti-toxin by Dr. W. M. Winston, thus assuring the public of 27 less prospective cases of Diphtheria.

Celebrate 75th Anniversary of Felician Sisters

The diamond anniversary of the Felician Sisterhood, which is represented in Posen by the five nuns of St. Stanislaus school, was celebrated at the Mother house, Crawford and Peterson, Chicago, last Thursday. A solemn mass of thanksgiving was celebrated by Monsignor Ostrowski. The deacon was Father Fr. Grzesinski; subdeacon, Father Felix Kachowski of Posen. The master of ceremonies was the Rev. Charles Marcinkiewicz. Bishop Shiel who was present, was assisted by Fathers Albert Olszewski and Francis Ryan. Monsignor Wentz of Milwaukee preached the Thanksgiving sermon.

The Felician community was founded in 1855 in Warsaw, Poland by Mother Mary Angela Truszkowska. In 1864 it was suppressed by order of the Czar as dangerous to Russian rule in Poland but shortly afterwards found a refuge in Austria, 19 years after the foundation, in 1874, the first Felician sisters came to the United States at the invitation of Father Joseph Dombrowski of Polonia, Wisconsin. There were five sisters in the party. From this humble start the community has grown in 56 years to 3,000 members in the United States divided into 5 provinces.

In 1930 the Felician Sisters have under their care 198 grammar schools and 4 preparatory schools with 123,572 children in attendance. The sisters also care for 2,243 orphans in 8 orphanages.

St. Stanislaus school in Posen has had five Felician sisters for the last six years. There are 270 children in the school. St. Isadore's school in Blue Island is also taught by Felician nuns.

Circle No. 4 met at the home of Mrs. W. Grabill last Wednesday. Plans were made for a Christmas party.

Get Ready, Old Timers, for the Lion's Dance

You have a date, old timer, for December 6—better paste that in your hat. For the Midlothian Lions are about to put on their first entertainment in the form of an Old Time Dance at Kreis Bros. hall. They have been fortunate in securing the Clarion Concertina Club orchestra of Tinley Park for that date.

Two weeks ago the Concertina players held forth at a dance in Tinley and the crowd jammed the Community hall. Many had to be turned away in spite of the fact that another dance was being held in Saenger hall the same night. Those who attended have been inquiring for the next date—and here it is.

There will be square dances, waltzes and two steps, as well as some dances for the younger set. Prizes will be awarded; $5.00 in gold will go to the oldest couple on the floor, $2.50 in gold for the best waltz, and $2.50 in gold for the best two-step.

Working hard and fast, the Lions committee, under the leadership of E. H. Searle, are sparing no pains to make this a memorable occasion.

Board Changes Meeting Place: Urges Relief

On motion of Burns, the village board voted Tuesday night to lease from Alfred A. Terry the second floor of his building as a meeting place for the board. The vote was 4 to 2. The Woman's club is to present a lease. Rental is $10 a month.

A permit was given to the Midlothian Water Association to open the streets where necessary to shut off water of delinquents.

The board urged all local organizations to have representatives meet with the Legion Monday on welfare work. The work will be divided into four branches—executive, survey, relief and employment.

It was reported that the Good-fellowship club has raised a sum of money to buy milk for needy school children, under the direction of R. J. White, John Whitts, and Francis Harper. They are now giving baskets to four families with a total of 38 persons. When the new organization is formed Monday night the club will merge its work with theirs.

School Bonds to be Voted on Dec. 6

Members of the school board of district 143 met Friday evening at the Len Small school to act on a petition for a bond issue of $119,000 for the Midlothian school. It was unanimously voted to call an election on Saturday, December 6th and seven-teen notices were posted to that effect.

Hours of election will be from 12 noon to 7 p. m. Polling places are:

Precinct 1..... Harding school
Precinct 2..... Len Small school
Precinct 3..... Lincoln Memorial school.

Precinct 4..... Bremen school
Under the plan proposed none of the principle will be paid off until January 1935, when the present tax muddle should be straightened out. Interest charges are estimated at 2c per $100 of assessed valuation each year. After 1935 payments will average 35c per $100 valuation on the principle per year. The issue matures January 1951.

It is pointed out that by 1935 there will be more taxpayers in the district and larger valuations to bear the burden than there are today. Passage of the bond issue is said to make possible a smaller tax levy in 1931 than in 1930 (the 1930 valuations are one third less than the 1929 valuations.)

Kent, Grace & Co., of Chicago, one of the largest bond houses in the city, are furnishing the bonds, ballots, legal advice and selling the bonds at 100 cents on the dollar. This firm is said to have twice helped the district when others have failed. Bonds will bear 5 1/4 per cent interest. Anticipation warrants, which had been depended upon to furnish the capital for the school bear 6 per cent interest.

The secretary of the board was asked to explain to MESSENGER readers why the school was built facing Harding ave., rather than Springfield. According to him, the board had planned to face the building on Springfield. They had legal opinion from Attorney Gorman that the two lots in the center of their holdings on Springfield that were held by the Midlothian Parent School Group were legally the property of the school district, as this property was donated by McIntosh for school purposes. Acting on this opinion, they started digging trenches for the foundation across this property.

However, this group threatened an injunction, such as has been obtained in Cicero and stopping the work there. Rather than have the work held up indefinitely and going thru expensive court proceedings, the board decided to face the building on Harding ave., although this street, graded and dedicated to the village, was not improved by cinders. Incidentally, this gives a splendid view of the building from Crawford ave.

Cars Crash at 135th And Crawford; 3 Injured

A Ford coupe driven by Peter J. Kettler of Midlothian and a Ford sedan driven by Charles J. Sabs, 4835 West 65th st., collided at the intersection of 135th and Crawford Saturday noon. The Kettler car was a total wreck, as it overturned in the crash.

Water Ass'n Purchases New Pump and Motor

With Frank Lilly acting as temporary chairman, the members of the Midlothian Water Association (of the "Gardens") voted Thursday night of last week to purchase a new pump and motor at a cost not to exceed $400, to be installed immediately. There is said to be sufficient delinquent money outstanding to take care of the expense.

The board of directors was authorized and instructed to send out delinquent notices to the effect that water would be shut off in ten days unless paid.

The work of installing the new equipment is to be done without charge by members. The pump will be moved directly over the well, 30 feet from its present location to get a nine-foot deeper suction. Doubling of the pump capacity will result from the installation of the new centrifugal pump. Opening of the 41st ave. well was discussed to take care of summer demands.

The selection of H. G. Nicholson and Frank Lilly to fill vacancies on the board was confirmed.

"If you doubt the legality of our action or our ability to carry it out just try us," says Frank Lilly.

New Methods Adopted In Chilean Industry

Production of Nitrate Fertilizer in Sun-Parched Desert Is Speeded Up.

AMERICAN engineers are helping to revolutionize an industry up in the sun-parched mountains of northern Chile.

The application of modern methods of mass production is making the Chilean nitrate industry a model of 20th century efficiency, according to Conrado Rios Gallardo, former Chilean Secretary of State, who was a recent visitor to the United States before becoming his country's ambassador to Peru.

With the elimination of waste and the use of labor-saving machinery, a marked decrease, he said, has been made in the cost of producing the fertilizer under the difficult conditions found in the arid desert.

"Never before has the nitrate industry occupied as strong a position as it does today," declared Ambassador Gallardo. "Not only have the mechanical processes been vastly improved, but the production has been stabilized to the benefit of both the producers and the consumers of this fertilizer."

The Chilean Government has taken an energetic part in the improvement of the industry. It has aided the producers through legislative enactment and has encouraged new American processes for mining and refining the fertilizer.

At present nearly one-half of the total capital invested in the industry is owned in the United States, pointed out the Ambassador. American farmers are also the largest users of Chilean nitrate, their consumption during the past five years averaging about 1,000,000 tons annually.

The nitrate fertilizer was first shipped to this country in 1830. It has been used ever since, and today it occupies the honor of being the oldest of the commercial fertilizers.

Many Improvements Made at Theatre

During the last few weeks many improvements have been made in the Lyric theatre, Blue Island. A new Western Electric Sound System is a decided improvement. Theatre seats of the latest type, arranged in descending order, have been installed in the balcony.

The old loud speakers on either side of the screen have been removed and new ones placed behind the screen, which by the way, is a new enlarged edition on the silver sheet. In keeping with these improvements, the stage could not very well be neglected. The old stage, which met with many unfavorable comments from the patrons is a thing of the past. So many alterations have been made that it wouldn't be far from the truth to say that the stage is a new one. Aside from these improvements for the convenience and entertainment of the thousands that attend this theatre, the safety of the public has not been overlooked. A new projection booth has been installed which is absolutely fireproof and sound proof.

With all these new improvements—comfort, safety and enjoyment, the Lyric theatre takes great pleasure in inviting the public to see the old place under new conditions. Comments, both favorable and unfavorable will be welcomed, but the management is sure that the New Lyric will meet with universal approval.

Mrs. Clare Moore and Mrs. George Way, who were operated on last week at the Southwest hospital, are expected home this week.

"Let's Go Native" at Lyric Wednesday, Thursday

"Let's Go Native," a rousing farce comedy-romance, with laughs and new song hits, is showing at the Lyric Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday.

Skeets Gallagher is the self-appointed King of the Island, a palm bedecked stretch of land somewhere in the South Seas. There Skeets amuses himself as best he can while scores of Island beauties do all in their power to make him forget the good old U. S. A. But when Jack Oakie, a hard-boiled taxi driver from New York, Jeanette McDonald, Kay Francis, James Hall and William Austin are ship-wrecked without chaperones on the Island, the fun begins. For Oakie, a bit bewildered by all the dark-eyed beauties who swish their grass skirts in playful fashion, takes to native life like a duck to water. This of course, hardly meets with the approval of King Skeets who has his hands full trying to patch up scorers of romances of all sizes and degrees. Suffice it is to say, however, that one rollicking sequence follows the other as love and fun on a desert Island takes its fling.

New Machine at Edith's Beauty Shoppe

A new machine, the "Arnoa Steam er", has been installed in Edith's Beauty Shoppe in the Hill Building. The purpose, according to Mrs. Edith Barker, proprietor is to re-vitalize and thoroughly cleanse the hair that has been deadened by many "waves".

The machine consists of a hood, containers of water and oil, used in steaming the hair, and feeding oil into the pores, and a lamp which cools and closes the pores after the treatments are complete. Mrs. Barker is very enthused over the results obtained.

Xmas Savings Checks Relieves Hard Times

$40 represents the average Christmas Savings account per depositor of this type of savings in the two Blue Island banks this year.

These banks paying out a total of $72,000 to 1800 accounts.

The banks are making a strong bid to get depositors to start a new and bigger Christmas Savings club already and are willing to talk business for the coming year right away.

That very few who get the Christmas Club savings habit quit it is revealed by the steadiness in the number of depositors year after year — after the idea was once established.

In 1929 there were approximately 2,000 Christmas Saving depositors while in 1930 the number was 1,800 although the amount deposited had dropped from approximately $120,000 of last year to $72,000 this year — according to the records made public both times.

Thus although the amount had dropped 48 percent the number of depositors was lessened only by 10 percent, proving that people saved even if they could not save as much.

The State Bank of Blue Island led in number of depositors with 1090 who saved a total of $27,000. The First National Bank of Blue Island had 800 accounts, totaling $45,000.

NEW LENOX

Luncheon was served at 7 o'clock, after which the club chorister Fred Haynes led in a community sing with Marion Lockwood at the piano. William Collatz was heard in a group of saxophone numbers, accompanied by Miss Lockwood.

Wilbur Newton of Joliet, was the speaker of the evening. Topic, "One good laugh deserves another," which was enjoyed by the assembled group. The next meeting of the club will be held in two weeks in the Scout Cabin in the Camp Grounds. Arvid Swan and Fred Francis are on the refreshment committee.

The Mud of Midlothian

We read on page two of last week's Suburban Star: MIDDLOTHIAN—brrh—R Ga. To which we unhesitatingly reply: Bullah Island—uuUUuu—brrump brrah, 2?? chxylluk brut, twatwa 12345678910; oout fforr the ccoount.

Or maybe that was the Blue Island Lions roaring a greeting to Midlothian.

Another neighboring publication heads a picture with—The Great Mogul of The Grand Drunk Railroad.

And that's a darn good name for a road that runs to Canada.

Heard on the 5:35:- I got an awful cold.

Why not try going sober for awhile? That's how I got it.

Peace reigned once more. A still, hushed, brooding, restful peace that eased the soul and bathed the mind in quiet. No more would the day open with the horror of battle clamor. Stilled forever was the machine-gun rattle, the shrieking shrapnel and the bursting clamor of death-dealing engines. No longer would the villagers huddle in cellars, shrinking in terror, till the awful bombardment had passed. Never again would the multitude be sacrificed to the will of one man.

Eddie Searle dropped a wrench in the transmission of his Ford.

It is rumored that Larry Sullivan is thinking of expanding his business to a chain store basis.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Eight busts of noted Illinois newspaper men were unveiled at the dedication of the editors' Hall of Fame at the University of Illinois, November 22. Twelve men, now deceased, have been chosen for this honor and the four unfinished busts will be completed and placed in the hall during the coming year. The names of the 12 are as follows: Victor Fremont Lawson, publisher-editor of the Chicago Daily News; Joseph Medbury Medill, builder of the Chicago Tribune; Elijah Parish Lovejoy, martyred anti-slavery editor of the Alton Observer; Henry Wilson Clendenin, pioneer editor of the Illinois State Register, Springfield; David Wright Parkley, editor of the model country newspaper of southern Illinois at Fairfield, in the 80s; Simeon Francis, dean of Illinois editors in the 40s and 50s, founder of the Illinois State Journal, Springfield; William Osborne Davis, builder of a distinguished community daily, the Bloomington Pantagraph; Melville Elijah Stone, founder of the Associated Press and champion of unbiased news reports; John Waterbury Clinton, editor-historian of northern Illinois Tri-County Press, Polo; John W. Bailey, builder of the world's largest high grade country weekly at Princeton; Edward Wyllis Scripps, founder of the United Press, Scripps-Howard enterprises, and patron of Science Service; Henry Means Pindell, editor-statesman of the Peoria Journal and Transcript.

The presentation address was made by Charles F. Elchenauer, editor of the Quincy Herald Whig, and acceptance by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, member of the board of trustees for the University of Illinois. John H. Finley, editor of the New York Times, delivered the main address.

Committees for the dedication were: Arrangements, Walter A. Strong, Chicago Daily News; W. H. Williamson, United States Publisher & Printer; Putney Haight, Chicago Tribune; A. A. Raboin, Chatsworth Plainealer; L. W. Murphy, University of Illinois; Advisory, J. M. White, University of Illinois; Hall of Fame, L. M. Wood, Flora Journal Record; A. L. Bowen, Illinois State Journal; A. A. Raboin; L. W. Murphy, University of Illinois; J. E. Deringer, Bushnell Record; H. L. Williamson, Information, W. M. Hout, Champaign News-Gazette; A. T. Burrows, Urbana Courier; J. R. Adams and V. A. Sholis, Daily Illini; C. Johnson, Associated Press; Don E. Chamberlain, United Press.

An order issued by Chief Justice Frank R. Dunn and filed in the office of Charles W. Vail, clerk of the Illinois Supreme court, cited Judge Silas Cook of the circuit court of Washington county to show cause why a writ should not issue prohibiting the Circuit court from enforcing an order restraining the Modern Woodmen of America from the collection of rates under the plan adopted by the head officers of the organization. The case will be heard by the Supreme court at the next term convening on December 2.

Charles W. Hadley, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, attended a meeting of the Glencoe Chamber of Commerce on November 18. Before a group of 90 business men of the North Shore suburb the subject of Mr. Hadley's address was "Law Enforcement as It Relates to Cook County." Mr. Hadley spoke concerning the tendency of evil influences to enter political life, and to this corrupt many business men who are in politics.

Mayor John Coleman, of Mt. Carmel, a member of the statewide activities committee of the governor's commission on unemployment and relief, has put forth special effort with others of his city to hasten the calling for bids on the Wabash river bridge at that place, a $750,000 project. The Illinois department of public works and buildings has set December 9 as the date for receiving bids.

Mrs. A. C. Rexroth, wife of A. C. Rexroth, for many years head of the supply department of the secretary of state's office at the state house, died recently. The funeral occurred at the home in Waterloo.

When the Supreme court of Illinois convenes on December 2, the court will face one of the lightest dockets in recent years, as shown by the calendar prepared by Charles W. Vail, clerk of the court. The call of the docket will finish on Monday, December 15. But nineteen petitions for writs of certiorari, including a number carried over from the October term, will be before the court for consideration.

The corn yield in Illinois will be ten bushels below normal, averaging 25 bushels per acre, says A. J. Surratt, federal and state agricultural statistician.

Pneumonia has been reported in Illinois of late at the rate of over 200 fresh cases every week, according to Dr. Andy Hall, state health director. Colds, exposures, dissipations, poor nutrition, bad ventilation and anything else that lowers bodily resistance helps cold weather to bring on pneumonia, he says.

In connection with the lifting of the rabies quarantine in Cook county, Director Stuart E. Pierson, of the state department of agriculture, has given out some statistics for the year compiled by Arnold H. Kegel, commissioner of public health for Chicago. There have been 554 human beings bitten by dogs, 221 of whom have taken anti-rabies treatments and none of whom have died. Dogs impounded in 1930 totaled 17,448; 229 dog heads were examined, and 62 dog heads were found positive.

It is now expected that the new mental hospital at Manteno will be opened in December with a capacity for 1,200 patients, later increasing this to 6,000. The buildings now about ready for occupancy include eight ward buildings, two stories in height, with half basements; and administration building housing offices and dormitories for employees; two separate dormitories for employees and five five-room bungalows for physicians and their families, and a power plant.

Suggestions for raising funds for relief work to be done by the local committees formed under the suggestions of Wayne Hummer, chairman of the governor's commission on unemployment and relief, are: Contributions from business concerns, individuals and employed persons (voluntary payroll deduction); and organizing fund raising movements. Five suggestions for fund raising given are: Stores to hold special sales and give percentage of sales; church and club suppers and entertainments, special movie nights giving a percentage of receipts, social functions, card games, and school children's "mite" boxes. It is recommended that if the organized charities in any locality are able to handle the relief for those who are suffering because of unemployment, the relief committee should only co-operate and assist the agencies already established.

Gasoline tax money received by counties may be used in payment of outstanding road bonds issued to construct state aid roads, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has written the state's attorney at Joliet.

Mail trucks are to be used soon in Lake county because the annulling of two passenger trains on the Wabash has left some towns with only one mail out or in during the morning and one in the evening. Starting December 1 a truck will leave Hannibal at 4:00 a. m. for Pittsfield, Winchester and Jacksonville. Another truck will start from Louisiana, Mo., in the morning and head for Pittsfield. The return trip will be made in the afternoon.

Sessions of the Illinois Conference on Public Welfare at Springfield were largely attended. Child welfare being the central theme, Miss Edna Zimmerman, state superintendent of child welfare, had much to do with the development of a program that was exceptionally practical. A. L. Bowen, state superintendent of charities, and Col. Frank D. Whipp, superintendent of prisons, and many other state officers were among those who helped make a success of the sessions. Governor Emmerson spoke at the opening session together with Prof. S. P. Breckenridge, U. of I. president of the conference, and Dr. William A. Bryan, superintendent of the Worcester (Mass.) State hospital. Many authorities from outside the state were heard at sessions on the 12th and 13th.

In an effort to co-operate with the governor's commission on unemployment relief, announcement was made by John F. Gilchrist, president of Chicago & Illinois Midland Railway company, that improvements amounting to $300,000, planned for 1931, will be started immediately in order to furnish work for between 400 and 500 men during the winter months. Ordinarily, these improvements would not have been started until April 1, 1931. They will include the following expenditures: Rock ballasting, $125,000; additional yard tracks at Springfield, $45,000; electric interlocking system at Springfield, $55,000; rebuilding telephone line and dispatching system, $75,000.

The largest bank in Quincy, the State Savings Loan and Trust company, with a capital of $1,000,000 and deposits upward of $6,000,000, according to the last statement, was closed by State Auditor Oscar Nelson. Two other banks, subsidiaries of the State Savings Loan and Trust company, also were closed. They were the South Side State Savings and the Payson State Savings bank at Payson.

Kidnaping the bride just as she was entering the Free Methodist church at Taylorville to be married, Eugene Kelly halted the wedding of his mother, Mrs. Belle Kelly, seventy-four, to James Long, sixty-six. Mrs. Kelly was sent to Marion, Ohio, to spend the winter with her daughter and Mr. Long was left waiting at the church.

While there was a nation-wide decrease in tourist travel the past summer, the Illinois Chamber of Commerce reports after a survey of such travel in 150 Illinois cities that in this state there were practically the same number of guests as last year. Part of this was due to publicity given by the cities themselves, and part to the Illinois Tourist Guide, published by the state chamber and the state of Illinois. Anyone wishing a copy of this guide should write to Secretary of State William J. Stratton at Springfield and one will be mailed free.

VELVET HAT IS INDISPENSABLE; TRIM ONE FUR WITH ANOTHER

THERE is a simple elegance about the velvet hat which makes it indispensable for afternoon wear. Does the modern velvet hat appear in symmetrical and orderly lines? Certainly not. The new velvet models are delightful in their casual air and their divergence from the conventional. Brims ripple, flow and undulate to balance the romantic and picturesque silhouettes of the costumes with which they are worn. They work themselves out in side flares, their diagonal treatments sounding a piquant and youthful note. Their folds of soft transparent velvet fall gracefully with never a touch of harshness.

Brimless types of flattering black velvet were never so unusual. The unexpected is the bon mot of the times. The term beret covers a multitude of novelties. Many tams have a decided bandeau with the tiny jaunty bow which made its appearance in the summer. Black velvet caps with turquoise trims or with swatches of flat fur, or with feather motifs or made up in two colors of velvet or more, all register as smart millinery.

The illustration shows a collection of up-to-the-minute velvet hats. The baby-bonnet type at the top sounds the black-and-white note in that its dare" as never before. No longer are they content to create merely from the utilitarian standpoint, now that they have fully awakened to the fact that that elusive something called "style" is as important an element as is the warmth and comfort of a coat. Now that fur stylists have accepted fashion's challenge to design along lines of ultra chic, they are recording a program of brilliant achievement. In arriving at style and attractiveness for the coat many designers are working along the theory that two furs are better than one. Which accounts for the fact that throughout the realm of fur fashions the idea of combining pelts of entirely different character and contrasting colorings is being exploited to quite a large degree.

The handsome coat of black persian lamb collared in platinum fox, which is in the foreground in the illustration, soft frill is lined with white velvet. This model is made of the new "ring" velvet which is as dainty and sheer as chiffon.

All velvet even to its generous bow which falls picturesquely to the shoulder is the message of the softly brimmed cloche to the left.

Special attention is called to the tricorn-like brims shown in the circle to the right above and to the left below, for these declare the very last word in "lines." The coardest of tiny white ostrich tips, which gives so distinctive a touch to the model pictured in the upper circle, is one among many evidences of a revival of plumage. A wee veil is worn with the chic little velvet tricorn to the left—latest from Paris!

That supple-brimmed velvet hat which you see to the right in the opposite circle is a reproduction of a Descent model. There is a front inset of contrasting velvet with a drooping bow of the same.

Seen from the back, the view is as charming as the front for the large black velvet hat which is shown last, for peeking from the underbrim is a cluster of small white ostrich tips.

About Fur Coats.

As to styling this season's coats, furriers are in a mood "to do and to tion, reflects this style influence with flattering results. The luxurious collar is designed with the thought in mind that back views must be as arresting to the eye as front. The animal head placed at the nape of the neck suggests interesting and novel trimming treatments for the future.

The uneven hemline of this coat occasions comment, because it is a feature of the more exclusive models. Novel hemlines are being made much of more especially among designers who cater to an elite clientele.

The disposition to combine one fur with another is widely expressed this season in seal coats which are enlivened with light beige or white collars and cuffs. Russian fitch effectively contrasts the brown-black seal model posed to the left. The youthful model in the center is enlivened with exquisite ermine.
